

Karl Leroy
Pratt

Jaqueline
Pommell
Pratt

Family

Karl Leroy Pratt Jr.
©
Jaqueline Pommell
Jackuline

LeRoy Pratt

Tandy Leather Company, the nation's largest retailer of leathers and leathercraft supplies, has appointed Leroy Pratt manager of their Provo Tandy Leather store.

Pratt, a leathercrafter for 40 years who has been with the company only a short time, previously worked at the Tandy Leather store in Salt Lake City.

Tandy Leather, 271 North University, Provo, features a wide selection of genuine leathers, kits, tools, hardware, finishes, instruction books and patterns for the beginner through the professional leathercrafter. Pratt said that leathers range from tooling and utility to upholstery and garment leather.

In response to the current "wearable art" fashion trend, the store stocks a complete selection of beads, leather lace, conchos, flashy studs, and rhinestones as well as the simple, inexpensive tools for their application.

Pratt will demonstrate leathercraft techniques to anyone interested, in addition to conducting leathercraft classes for beginners. Offered Wednesdays 6-7 p.m. for a fee of $20, six lessons cover such basics as stamping, carving, dyeing, lacing, finishing and assembling leathercraft projects.

In addition, Pratt offers free leathercraft classes, by appointment during working hours, to all Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts. Like all Tandy Leather store managers, Pratt serves as a merit badge counselor in leatherwork.

Leroy Pratt, new manager for Tandy Leather in Provo, invites everyone to come by the store for a 1987 Tandy Leather catalog. Pratt says the friendly, bright store offers particularly interesting displays.

Pratt can also arrange to demonstrate leathercrafting for schools and institutions, on request. For more information contact Leroy Pratt, manager, Tandy Leather, 271 North University, Provo.